Hiring Manager
Hiring Team
Catalyze

Dear Hiring Team,

You are looking for someone who can hear a client's problem on a 9PM Zoom, turn it into a clear brief by morning, and still catch the detail that would have broken the launch. That has been my job for eleven years.

At CITT Services I led technical delivery for six international brokerage platforms with a US-based team. I ran ticketing workflows, SLA frameworks, and escalation paths, and wrote proposals and architecture diagrams. Clients got what changed, what it costs, and when it ships, not optimistic answers.

I also build websites myself, end to end: a freelance marketplace, a community commerce platform with row-level security, e-commerce storefronts, and a publishing site on Astro. React, Next.js, Node, Python, SQL. I know what a JWT is because I have debugged expired ones at midnight, which is why I can ask sharper questions and give honest timelines.

Catalyze's work is why I want this role. Peatlands, oceans, food systems, wildlife trade: the web behind those missions has to be precise and built to last. I spend my days building digital tools for small Indonesian businesses and a parish community, work judged by whether real people can use it. I want my next years to go into projects with that weight.

Based in Jakarta, remote-ready, and comfortable with evening calls across US time zones. I move fast, document everything, and details do not slip.

I would welcome the chance to talk.

Warm regards,
